Performance information

(3) The information must, as a minimum, include the following elements: (a) a description of the main factors likely to affect future returns for the investor, identifying those most likely to determine the outcome of the investment and other factors which could have a material impact on performance; (b) identification of the most relevant index, benchmark, target, or proxy, as applicable, along with an explanation of how the PRIIP is likely to compare in terms of performance and volatility;

What could affect my return positively?

As the portfolio is mainly made of CLO debt and Equity positions, the most important factors are default rates in both the US and European Loan markets as well as the cost of CLO liabilities and the spreads in the loan markets. The absence of defaults in the underlying CLO portfolios or low default rates as well as low cost for CLO liabilities (mostly the spread for CLO AAA tranches) will have a positive impact on the performance. Higher spreads for loans will have as well a positive effect. The performance of both US loan and European loan index are relatively good indicators of the short term performance of the fund.

Overall spread tightening in credit markets is likely to benefit returns. These have all been observed to be positively correlated to the Fund.

What could affect my return negatively?

At the opposite, factors that affect returns negatively are above historical average default rates as well as a higher cost for CLO liabilities. The performance of the fund, in the short term, will be relatively highly correlated with loan market (US and European) performances. General factors that affect returns negatively are the poor performance of credit markets, downward rating migration in the speculative grade universe.

What could happen in severely adverse market conditions?

Under severely adverse market conditions, investor could expect to lose some or all of its investment.

When default rates in both the US and the European Loan markets are very high (>5 to 6% per year) as well as when there is numerous downgrades of loans, payments to CLO equity and to CLO debt can be interrupted. In very severe situation it may happen that some of these cashflows never resume.

This occurred through the Great Financial Crisis (2008-2009) where the fund experienced a mark-to-market loss of 90% (for its NAV, the share price lost 95%) before the fund recovered part of its value in the following years.

What happens if Volta Finance Ltd is unable to pay out?

If the Company is not able to pay you out what the Company may owe at any point in time, you are not covered by any national compensation scheme. To protect you, the assets are held with a separate company, a depositary. Should the Company default, the depositary would liquidate the investments and distribute the proceeds to the investors. In the worst case, however, you could lose your entire investment.
